4. PROJECT DEVELOPMENT

a. Programme changes

Overall, the programmes in this iteration of Ethelontêr have remained similar to those in the previous iteration. A major change in the program was the removal of Sentosa on the last day. This was due to safety concerns and the high costs associated with the booking of Sentosa venues. As such, the Sentosa cell was renamed to Fast and Furious(F&F) and all F&F activities were based in school due to the ease of transport, disposal of food waste on top of the above reasons. Another major change is in relation to the beneficiaries. On top of the three main beneficiaries that we approach usually (elderly, youth and ID), we also approached the physically disabled sector due to past feedback about wanting more diverse beneficiaries. Although we ultimately were unable to secure any beneficiaries from the new sector in this iteration, we believe that collaborations with this sector could still be implemented in the future iterations of Ethelontêr. The last major program change came from Special Buddy(SB). Instead of focusing on pair bonding amongst the freshmen, this iteration of SB focused more on sister OG bonding. This was done to encourage freshmen to converse with others from other OGs and not just their own OG members.

b. Raising awareness of mental wellness

The Cluedo cell has introduced mental wellness through the development of character profile and briefing at the end of Cluedo segment. Participants may be exposed to emotions and triggers of the characters when interacting with them. It helps participants to understand the importance of sensitivity and observance. Many times we may experience some common emotions such as stress and anxiety. Through Cluedo, it has aimed to raise greater awareness of mental wellness and also platforms and services available to seek assistance.

5. SUGGESTIONS FOR FUTURE DEVELOPMENT

a. Exploring the Idea of Publicity Videos for Hype

Following the suggestion from E15, we intended to come up with publicity videos to hype up the atmosphere in the weeks and even months leading up to the actual camp. However, due to the tight timeline, we were unable to have the idea materialise. That being said, we do see the value of creating publicity videos. This year, we utilised instagram advertisements to help promote the camp. However, the advertisements most likely did not reach as much people as we hoped to as we may have chosen the wrong tags. We believe that this method could bring in more people if done right. We also tried to reach out to the interact clubs from polytechnics and junior colleges. However, the response was rather negative although I think that this method would be more effective if we had more time to convince the clubs. All in all, for any of these suggestions to work, we highly recommend forming the publicity team as quickly as possible due to the tight timeline.

b. Initiating Beneficiary Visits for OC Members Before the Camp

Some of the OC members may not have much volunteering experience prior to the camp. It may be good to conduct beneficiary visits to either some of the current CSC RVPs or the PO that we are working with. By visiting the PO before the camp, it gives the OC the experience of interacting with the beneficiaries. This will allow them to share with fellow peers the experience and even any challenges, thus better preparing the participants for VE day. Also, VE leaders will have a better understanding of the profile of the beneficiary, allowing them to facilitate expectation- and goal-setting for the participants. For beneficiaries with intellectual disabilities, especially the low functioning ones, not many people have experience interacting with them. Hence, if there is a visit to organization with low functioning beneficiaries, it will help VE cell and VE leaders to plan activities that are suitable for the beneficiaries and provide better knowledge for the participants.
